ON A PERSONAL NOTE

Dr. Chiriboga and her husband, a family medicine physician, are raising four children. The family stays busy with a variety of community and sports activities.

In addition to firsthand experience raising multiples, she has gained a wealth of practical knowledge about parenting—including “mommy medicine.”

“You learn to adapt your parenting style to the unique needs and personality of each child,” she says. “Medical school teaches what to do, but parenting teaches you how to do it.”

Outside the office, Dr. Chiriboga likes to unwind with a good mystery novel, smooth jazz, and an icy java chip.
