ON A PERSONAL NOTE

Dr. Heller comes from a long line of sports fans. In fact, her father was drafted to play major league baseball by the Baltimore Orioles out of high school.

After a childhood filled with playing and watching sports, she knew exactly what she wanted to do with her life. But a funny thing happened on the way to becoming a sports reporter.

Dr. Heller entered USC to study journalism. After volunteering at Childrens Hospital Los Angeles during her freshman year, she changed her major to biology and set her sights on pediatrics.

Today she remains an avid sports fan, especially for USC teams.

“My husband and I have had football season tickets for USC for the past seven years. They were a gift from my husband on our wedding day—and I was thrilled to get them,” she says.

Dr. Heller and her husband (another HMF physician) live in the San Gabriel Valley and are looking forward to the birth of their first child.
