SUMMARY OF EXPERIENCE

Before joining HMF, Dr. Zeiss spent 18 years treating patients in a local practice that was founded in 1938. (He joined the practice in 1973.)

Dr. Zeiss was a major in the U.S. Army from 1969 to 1971, and served at Walston Army Hospital in Fort Dix, New Jersey. He spent his first year in charge of the pneumonia ward and his second year managing the adult medicine department, which treated both soldiers on active duty as well as Army retirees.

ON A PERSONAL NOTE

Dr. Zeiss likes the outdoors. He enjoys fly fishing, backpacking trips with his sons and daughter, and his weekly golf game with a fellow HMF physician.

He's also a student of geography and astronomy who peers at the night sky with his trusty 10" Meade reflector telescope.

At home, Dr. Zeiss works in his garden, listens to classic music, and takes care of his four-legged family: two dogs, two cats and two tortoises.
